EVIDENCE MEMO — DAILY DIARY DISCREPANCY REPORT

OFFICE OF THE CENTRAL INVESTIGATION AGENCY (SPECIMEN)
Sub-Divisional Task Force

Memo No.:	CIA/MP/2006/213 (Specimen)
Reference Case:	Multiple Missing-Persons Complaints, Fictional Suburban Police Station Jurisdiction (Specimen)
Prepared by:	S.P. R. Chauhan, Central Investigation Agency (fictional)
Subject:	Comparison of Daily Diary (DD) entries with independently sourced missing-persons complaints

1. Background

Upon this Agency taking over investigation, complainant families produced carbon-copy acknowledgement receipts for missing-persons reports lodged at the local police station between 2005 and 2006, numbering seventeen (17) in total. On requisitioning the corresponding Daily Diary (DD) register from the police station, only six (6) of these seventeen reports were found reflected as DD entries.

2. Findings

2.1 Of the eleven (11) missing entries, cross-verification with the station's inward correspondence register confirms that a written complaint was received and stamped on the corresponding dates, but no matching outward DD serial number was ever generated.

2.2 In three (3) instances, a DD entry does exist for the date in question but describes a different, unrelated matter, and the serial numbering shows a gap consistent with an entry having been skipped and later filled with unrelated content.

2.3 Statements gathered from station clerical staff indicate a practice of orally advising complainant families that the missing person had “probably run away” and discouraging formal registration, particularly where the family could not identify a suspect.

2.4 No entries in the relevant period record any search, verification, or referral action corresponding to the eleven unregistered complaints.

3. Preliminary Conclusion

The pattern of selective non-registration and diary-entry gaps identified above is, in the opinion of this Agency, inconsistent with routine administrative oversight and warrants further examination of the individual officers who were on duty on the relevant dates.

WITNESS STATEMENT

Recorded under Section 161, Fictional Code of Criminal Procedure

Name of Witness: H. Yadav (fictional)

Designation: Complainant; parent of a missing minor

Recorded by: S.P. R. Chauhan, Central Investigation Agency

Date: 11 January 2007 (Specimen)

Statement

"My child went missing on the way back from the market in October 2005. I went to the local police station the next morning along with my neighbour and gave a written complaint, which the duty constable read and stamped with the receiving date. I was told to come back after a week."

"When I went back after two weeks, I was told that no such complaint was on their record and that I must have gone to the wrong police station. I insisted and showed my carbon-copy receipt with the stamp, but the officer on duty said the register did not show it and that they could not act without it appearing in the diary."

"I made similar attempts on four further occasions over the following year, each time being told to 'wait' or that my child had 'likely run away', though I never received any written reply. I only received an actual DD number and follow-up when the case was taken up by the Central Investigation Agency in 2006."
